one of the key principles for effective aid programmes is that recipient agencies exert high degrees of ownership over the agendas resources systems and outcomes of aid activities sovereign recipient states should lead the process of development yet despite this well recognised principle the realities of aid delivery mean that ownership is often compromised in practice aid ownership and development examines this inverse sovereignty hypothesis with regard to the states and territories of the pacific island region it provides an initial overview of different aid regimes over time maps aid flows in the region and analyses the concept of sovereignty drawing on a rich range of primary research by the authors and contributors it focuses on the agencies and individuals within the pacific islands who administer and apply aid projects and programmes there is indeed evidence for the inverse sovereignty effect particularly when island states and their small and stretched bureaucracies have to deal with complex and burdensome donor reporting requirements management systems consultative meetings and differing strategic priorities this book outlines important ways in which pacific agencies have proved adept not only at meeting these requirements but also asserting their own priorities and ways of operating it concludes that global agreements such as the paris declaration on aid effectiveness in 2005 and the recently launched sustainable development goals can be effective means for pacific agencies to both hold donors to account and also to recognise and exercise their own sovereignty it is hardly possible to overrate the pacific basin in its economic and political importance currently it is one of the economic regions with the highest dynamic growth throughout the world economically this region is sometimes considered to be the future centre of the world economy often with reference to well known authors such as arnold toynbee and herman kahn who predicted the inevitable approach of a pacific century the economic development of the pacific basin has proceeded far already following japan s ascent into the position of an economic superpower considering the concentration of east and south east asian dynamic developing countries the pacific basin has meanwhile developed into a regional centre of economic activities furthermore the ambitions and in terests of three nuclear powers the usa the soviet union and china collide in this region obviously these countries increasingly perceive and take into account the political and strategic importance of this region this book presents a comparative study of the vision ability and dynamism on the part of governments in selected asian pacific countries as they engage in the distribution of e governance consequently it creates a platform for mutual learning and offers a dispassionate evaluation of mega e projects it is an interdisciplinary study of information and communication technology within mainstream social science research and attempts to bridge the gap in empirical research between the nature of technology and the manner in which it is governed the analysis shows that hegemonic and panoptic structures of surveillance and control may derail efforts to establish sustainable e governance while a liberal futuristic framework with open socio technology networks on big data analytics ipv6 and cloud computing may strengthen the trend towards democratizing institutions further the book highlights the extraordinary energy being generated in the emerging new world through their use of the internet and suggests how governments could translate this into a new wealth of economic opportunities social inclusion and equitable development in addition to achieving the mdgs millenium development goals lastly it emphasizes the importance of a visionary approach which wherever present has been able to sustain e governance by meaningfully linking the micro to the macro and heritage to the horizon this edited volume examines the importance of quality issues in contemporary higher education systems in the asia pacific part one foregrounds relevant discussions of quality within today s globalized interconnected and complex higher education systems while part two focuses on selected universities in the asia pacific region chapter contributors discuss how quality issues and quality assurance mechanisms are implemented in their situation specific systems part three extends the research of higher education quality assurance in hawaii pacific university hpu and the diverse international student body in the australian higher education system the conclusion chapter discusses a typology of methods used by higher education systems in establishing effective quality assurance mechanisms
